Content Ideas for Personal UGC Accounts

A guide for your creator page. What to post, why it matters, and how to never run out of ideas.

Your page is more than a portfolio

Your personal UGC account is where brands get to know you: your filming style, your creativity, your personality, and your growth as a creator. Think of it as three things in one. Your personal brand, your portfolio, and your creator journey.

You don't need to reinvent the wheel every time you post. The goal is simple: create consistently, and give your audience and potential brands different ways to get to know you.

This guide is built around five content pillars, plus extra idea banks for the days when nothing new is happening. Whenever you're stuck on what to post, open this up, pick an idea, and make it yours.

THE FIVE PILLARS

01 Show your work · prove what you can create

02 Educate · share what you're learning

03 Share your journey · let people follow along

04 Show your creator life · keep it personal

05 Personality & real talk · be someone worth following

Show your work

Your page should make it easy for a brand to see what you're capable of: your filming style, your creativity, and your range across different types of UGC. Let the work speak.

Educate

Share what you're learning and create content that could help another creator. You don't need to be an expert to educate. Share the lessons you've picked up along the way and document what's working for you.

Share your journey

People want to follow a journey, not just look at a portfolio. Document where you are right now: what you're learning, your wins, your challenges, and how you're growing as a creator.

Income recap

A note on income content: share it when you genuinely have something exciting to celebrate. You never need to post your earnings every month.

Show your creator life

Your personal UGC account should still feel personal. Show people what it actually looks like to build a career as a creator. Lifestyle content makes your page feel natural and gives people a reason to connect with you beyond the work.

Personality & real talk

Your personality is one of the biggest things that makes your account stand out. Don't be afraid to create content that's relatable, funny, honest, or that simply shows more of who you are.

IDEA BANK

When you have nothing to post

You won't always have a new campaign, a new product, or an exciting announcement. That's fine, and it doesn't mean you have nothing to post. Save this list for those days.

Film a practice UGC video with a product you own

Show your filming setup

Share three UGC tips

Share a lesson you recently learned

Break down an old video: what would you change?

Recreate one of your old videos

Film a before & after edit

Share your favorite creator apps

Share your favorite filming angles

Show how you create a hook

Film a day in your life

Share your current creator goals

Talk about why you started UGC

Share a creator win

Answer a common UGC question

Show your workspace

Create a POV about being a UGC creator

Recreate an ad you like

Share something you wish you knew at the start

CHALLENGES & SERIES

Recurring series make posting easier. You're not starting from a blank page every time.

30 days of becoming a UGC creator

30 days of posting on my UGC account

One UGC video every day

Recreating five brand ads

Testing UGC hooks

Testing different filming angles

Turning one product into five videos

My creator progress every week

One UGC tip every day

One thing I learned this week

My weekly creator wins

My monthly creator goals

Reviewing my old UGC videos

Auditing my portfolio

Improving one old UGC video

PUTTING IT TOGETHER

Your content mix

Not every post needs to be educational. A strong personal UGC account feels balanced. It moves between showing, teaching, documenting, and simply being you.

Some days, showcase your work

Some days, teach something

Some days, document your journey

Some days, show your lifestyle

Some days, just let your personality through

The goal isn't to make every post perfect. It's to consistently give people a reason to follow you, and give brands a reason to remember you.

WHEN YOU DON'T KNOW WHAT TO POST, ASK YOURSELF

01 What am I working on right now?

02 What have I learned recently?

03 What could I teach another creator?

04 What am I excited about?

05 What could I show instead of tell?

If you can answer even one of these, you have a piece of content.

ONE LAST THING

Make it yours

Your personal UGC account doesn't need to look like anyone else's, and you don't need to copy another creator's strategy. Use these ideas as starting points, then bring your own personality, experiences, opinions, and style to every single one.

The best personal UGC accounts do two things at once. They make people feel like they're getting to know you, and they show brands exactly what you're capable of creating. Your page should make a brand think:

"I know who this creator is.

I like their content.

I can see them creating for my brand.

I want to work with them."

Let's build.
